Disaster Does Not Define Us:
Creating and Rebuilding Resilient Communities

Introduction

In recent years, the world has witnessed a persistent and ongoing global trend of increasingly devastating disasters. These disasters range in size, scale and scope but can often be categorized as complex humanitarian emergencies, man-made accidents, or natural hazards and severe weather events.¹ For those interested in supporting both disaster readiness and relief efforts in the United States and abroad, this guide presents a list of nonprofit organizations working globally to prepare for and alleviate the impact of humanitarian, man-made, and natural disasters. The nonprofits featured support resiliency and relief efforts across a range of service areas including health, child support, food, housing, and other programmatic areas that assist communities before, during and after disaster strikes. The roster of organizations also includes nonprofits working directly in the impacted communities with a place-based, local partnership approach towards recovery and relief that is intentionally tailored to the unique needs of the affected community.

This list is meant to be a sampling of nonprofits providing support around disaster preparedness and relief as there are many other organizations engaged in incredible work around the world. The organizations listed below have been reviewed by third-party sources and the Philanthropy Management team. Links to donate to each nonprofit directly or through a Morgan Stanley Global Impact Funding Trust (MS GIFT) donor advised fund are included throughout this guide.

The organizations in this guide are listed in alphabetical order. The following key provides further information about the focus area(s) of each organization:

Project: Camp

EIN: 84-4640242

Reach: USA

Overview: Project: Camp's vision is safety and joy for every child impacted by disaster. What this looks like: strong, resilient, interconnected communities where children and parents are no longer traumatized by disaster, but are able to have safety, wellness, and positive memories. They pop up free, trauma-informed day camps to support children and their families in the wake of disasters. They also organize and prepare communities to provide childcare when their communities are impacted by disasters. During emergencies, access to free, quality childcare is important to support children's mental wellbeing and provides parents with time to process and make necessary plans. But too often this critical component of community recovery is missing. Project: Camp fills this gap.
